THE Broad Arrow makes the following remarks with regard to the action of the War Office in conveying troops to China by the Easterly route instead of vid Canada. The Canadian Pacific Railway is completed from Halifax to Vancouver. Trains run across in something under a week. The carriages are fitted to carry omigrants, and are easily adaptable for the conveyance of troops. -But although the distance from this country to China vid Canada is half as short again Hong Kong and Singapore by the latter postal contract for the conveyance of mails | earth? to Hong Kong vid Halifax or Quebec and Vancouver, which was entered into in July, 1889, and is now about to come into force. The question of utilizing the Canadian Pacific Railway was for some time before the Government, and on entering into the contract, which involves the payment of a substantial subsidy, is published a Treasury Minute in justification of its action. The Government considered the scheme as a whole, offering as it does direct communication entirely through British territory and an alternative route to the East, desirable in the interests of the State, apart from postal considerations. The latter were admittedly of considerable value, but they were not held to be in themselves of sufficient importance to justify the adoption of the scheme. The considerations which determined the Government to-grant the ambaidy were, that the line of the railway nor the other is utilizing it.

THE Singapore Free Press says :- The financial position of the bazaar in Singapore at present is one calculated to cause the gravest apprehension, and unfortunately the outlook before us for the current year is anything but hopeful. At present matters are in their normally dull state before the Chinese New Year, when the dealers want all their available ready money, and after it is over there will doubt less be a revival to some extent, but i cannot be denied that this year will in all probability be one which will cause great anxiety amongst the European mercantile community, and it will be well if 1891 passes away without some of the largest failures on record taking place. Under ordinary circumstances one would have thought that the rise in silver which took place before many months of last year had expired would have materially assisted the dealers by permitting of the European merchants selling their goods at a correspendingly lower dollar price, but unfortunately these suppositions have not been altogether justified, for the list of failures in the bazaar in 1890 was a heavy one. The heavy speculations in mining and other shares of two years ago did a vast amount of injury, both by encouraging a gambling spirit, and by tying up money in enterpuises which showed little prospect of yielding anything like a fair return. And unfortunately Singapore reaps little benefit out of the money so invested. The typical Company is one of say £100,000 registered capital out of which possibly £60,000 is netted by the vendors. £10,000 goes in floating the Company and in purchasing the necessary plant, leaving only the absurdly and dangerously low margin of £30,000 available as working capital. The result is in many cases easy to predict; before the enterprise begins to make much return for the money invested the £82,000 is exhausted, and there is almost no choice but to close the concern, leaving a dead loss to those interested. Tightness in the money market is very widespread just now, and the number of Chinese dealers who could meet their liabilities to morrow if called upon to do so would probably be a very small one indeed. Saigon, of course, with its heavy and restrictive tariff placed upon the import of foreign goods, is in a very duli state; nothing else could be expected under the circumstances. The recent unfortunate and disserrous fire in Bangkok will also no doubt make its influence hoplescantly felt amongst those dealers who operate largely in that direction. To a large extent the European merchants have themselves to biame for the heavy risks they run with the Chinese dealers. The absurdly long credit almost universally accorded to them is most in. medial measures were adopted and an classes, with rare exceptions, and when pressly provided for by treaty, and that the traits.
